Once a tiger was caught and kept in a cage. He tried to free himself but did not succeed. He saw a Brahmin walking by, "Let me out, oh good man," he cried.

"Please open the door." The Brahmin refused because he knew the tiger would eat him up if he let him out.

"How can I be so ungrateful ?" the tiger said. "I will never harm a man who helps me. Please believe me. Do let me out I will be your friend and servant."

The tiger pleaded and the Brahmin took pity on him and opened the door. "Ha!" cried the tiger as soon as he was set free. "I am going to eat you, poor man! I am hungry."

The Brahmin was shocked. "You ungrateful beast!" he said, 'Is this the way to repay a favour ?' "This is the way of the world," said the tiger. "It is unwise to expect gratitude from anybody." A jackal was passing by. The Brahmin asked him to be the judge and told him the whole story. The jackal thought for a moment and told them that he would like to see the spot where they met. When they reached the cage, he told the tiger that it looked too small for him. To prove himself the tiger jumped into the cage. At once the jackal shut the cage, bolted it and said, "This man was kind enough to set you free and you wanted to kill him in return for his help. Stay here for ever, you ungrateful thing!" The Brahmin thanked the jackal for saving him.
